ABSTRACT

A simulation system and method are for computer-implemented simulation and verification of a control system under development, the simulation system including a generic model animation and in-model calibration interface, which uses measurement and calibration technologies with a host-target architecture, whereby the host includes at least one respective modeling tool and on the target software of the control system is executed.